Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

THE ultimatum of the "Square Deal Association" to Governor Allen to repeal Louisiana's dictatorship laws expired the middle of this week—and nothing has happened, although press dispatches advise us that the "Square Dealers" are holding military drills at Baton Rouge with all the comic zeal of a Gilbert & Sullivan opera chorus.

Review of First Week Finds Many Legislative Bills

Four Racing Measures—Three Propose Establishing State Police

WEEK-END RECESS

Solons Will Resume Session at 2 o'clock Monday Afternoon

By HENRY N. DORRIS
Associated Press Staff Writer
LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—The legislature, paused for breath Saturday after setting the fastest first-week pace in years, counted the bills on its calendar at nearly 200.

Various points in Governor Futtrell's biennial recommendations were covered by the measures introduced, but the assembly apparently shied away from its most pressing problem—how and when to take care of the unemployed.

The house, through concurrent resolutions yet to be acted upon in the senate, nibbled at the matter of proposing joint committees to study and estimate revenues possible from luxury, liquor, racing and slot machine taxes.

Taxation—all but the slot machines, were proposed in measures on the calendars, but none of them direct any money toward unemployment relief.

Sales tax measures proposed in each house would go principally to payment of old age pensions. Bills to set up such a system number three in the house and two in the senate.

The four racing bills—three in the house and one in the senate—all propose that revenue from taxing pari-mutuel betting pools be directed into the funds of the Arkansas Tuberculosis Sanatorium, the state hospital, or the old age or confederate pension funds.

40-Cent Liquor Tax
Rep. J. A. Christian's bill to legalize liquor and tax it 40 cents a gallon, with wholesale, manufacturers and retailers license fees at from $2,000 to $2,500, would go to the common school and charitable institutions.

Three bills—one in the senate and two in the house—would create a state police force as suggested by the governor.

Two measures—sponsored by Senators Eugene and Wilson and by Senator Gilbert—would levy a privilege tax on chain stores ranging up to $150 per store where one concern operated more than 20 stores. The Fugan-Wilson bill does not direct the revenue into any channel, but that by Gilbert would go to the old age pensioners.

Various measures aiming at hauling down the crime wave were on the calendars of both houses. Senator Ellis proposed sterilization of habitual criminals and the feeble-minded, but the most drastic was that embodied in the house measure by Harris of Jefferson. It would require the second offenders to give a double-sentence, while third offenders would be sentenced to life imprisonment, with the power of the governor to parole or

2 Brick Buildings Destroyed by Fire Saturday at Ozan

Barrow Store and Jones-Barrow Hardware Firm Burned Out

NO FIRE APPARATUS

Hope Sends Own Truck to Scene, But Structures Are Past Helping

Fire gutted the John H. Barrow general mercantile store and the Jones-Barrow hardware store at Ozan early Saturday, causing damage of several thousand dollars.

Both were brick structures. The fire was discovered between 1 and 2 a. m. in the second story of the hardware building, spreading nearby to the Barrow store.

The fire gained such headway that citizens were helpless in their efforts to extinguish the blaze, as Ozan has no adequate fire fighting equipment and water system.

Hope fire department responded to the alarm, but both buildings were caving in when the truck arrived.

Origin of the blaze was undetermined. The loss is partly covered by insurance.

Parks May Take Election Appeal

Meanwhile Kitchens Asks Vacate Order, and Special Election

HAMBURG, Ark.—Although Wade Kitchens of Magnolia was declared the Democratic nominee for Congress from the Seventh District in a ruling handed down by Judge Patrick Henry in circuit court here Friday, the controversy, which has been dragged through the courts for three months, is far from settled however.

Congressman Tilman B. Parks, who was declared the nominee by the Democratic State Committee, is expected to appeal to the Arkansas Supreme Court.

Kitchens said that he would ask Judge Henry to declare the office vacant and if this is done, he would ask Governor Futtrell to call a special election. Kitchens conceded that sooner or later he will have to appear before the Elections Committee of the national House of Representatives if he pursues this course.

Parks has contended that the circuit court here had no jurisdiction over the case because Parks already had taken his seat in congress. He contended that only the house had the right to decide whether he should remain in his seat.

Judge Henry found that Kitchens had won the nomination by 13 votes. On the face of the returns as reported by the Democratic committees of the counties in the district, Parks had won by 291 majority in last August's election of primary.

It had been expected that the result would depend on Judge Henry's ruling on Parks' request that the entire votes of Crossett and Parkdale precincts in Ashley be thrown out.

But Judge Henry pursued a course that surprised both sides.

He declined to throw out the votes of the two Ashley county precincts but his ruling in effect was that the votes from these two precincts had been reported incorrectly.

He ruled that Kitchens had received 196 votes at Crossett, although the official returns gave him only 85. Kitchens

No Pay? But Farmer Representative Can Get on Without Cash

Editor The Star: Our spirits are low—both ways.

Everything had been going along in good shape, and old-timers up here tell me we had turned out more work in the first week than is common.

But they told us Thursday we wouldn't get paid this week.

Are we blue? Yes—but there are a lot of us farmers and others up here who have learned how to get along without money.

Don't you folks loose sleep. We'll make out.

4-Inch Rain Rakes Hempstead County

2 Inches Midnight to 7 a. m.—2 Inches More by Noon Saturday

A rainstorm that broke with fury early Saturday morning drenched Hempstead county with nearly four inches of precipitation.

Two inches fell from midnight until 7 a. m. Saturday, and 1.98 inches was recorded from 7 a. m. until noon Saturday, the Fruit and Truck Branch Experiment station reported.

It was the heaviest 12-hour down-pour for the year.

Several streets in Hope were flooded Saturday morning, particularly South Main and South Elm where a sheet of water 300 yards was observed.

Rural mail carriers were temporarily held up, waiting for the water to recede. The carrier on Hope Route One found himself water-bound on Sixteenth street. He reversed his position and made an attempt to deliver the route from the opposite end. He was unreported at the Hope post office at 2 p. m. Saturday.

Other carriers completed their routes with difficulty. Robert Wilson, postmaster, reported.

$30 Pension Split by U. S. and States

Persons Under 65 Would Join Employers in Paying by Future Funds

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The way to a bigger old age pension than $30 a month was pointed out Friday by President Roosevelt. It came while threats of a fight within the Democratic party for more liberal unemployment and old age insurance were rising from the ranks on Capitol Hill.

President Roosevelt said at his press conference that while social financing demanded that the federal government not give more than $15 a month for immediate pensions, there was no reason why the states should not give a larger amount.

The president said he hoped social security legislation would be passed quickly so that the state legislatures could act on the necessary legislation to fulfill their part of the bargain. He said most of them would adjourn about the end of March.

Arrangements were made at the capitol to begin hearings on the measure early next week by both the House Ways and Means and the Senate Finance Committees.

Republicans held their council. The

Tells Effort to Beat Slump

The chart at the right, indicating the volume of industrial production in the U. S., shows clearly six efforts to get business and industry started since the depression broke late 1929 and production fell below normal.

In early 1930 the slight upward tendency is attributed to President Hoover's conferences in which states, cities and industries were urged to spend freely for construction and equipment. The rise of early 1931 was affected by bonus payments and improved conditions abroad.

The third uprising, in 1932, probably marks the turning point from the lowest depths. In early 1933 came the following recovery the country ever knew, following the banking crisis, the first four months of administration activity, and hopes of stabilization abroad.

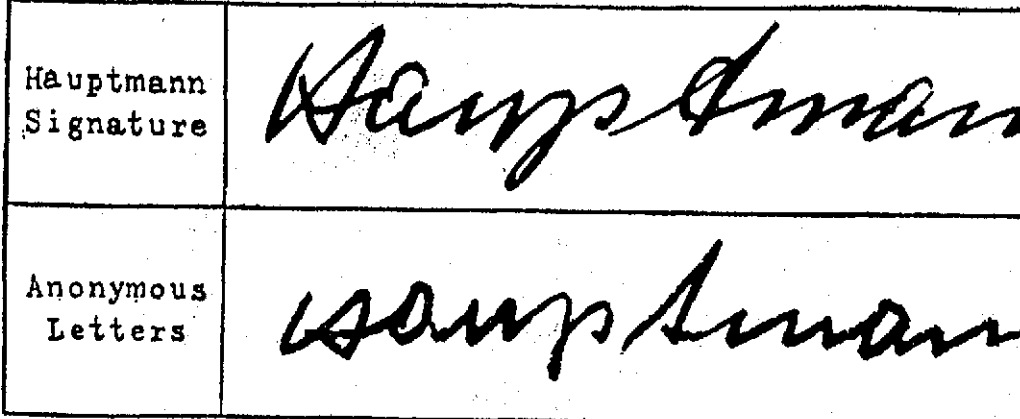

The fifth rise came early in 1934 and lasted until midsummer, and the chart shows at the right the rise in factory production which began last October and still continues despite the usually slack mid-year season. The Business Bulletin of the Cleveland Trust Co., which compiled the chart, says the present upward movement is "more powerfully influenced by natural forces" than any of the others.

The table at the top gives the rate of industrial production in terms of points above and below an assumed normal of zero.

Composite Signature Linked to Hauptmann

Did Bruno Hauptmann inadvertently sign the Lindbergh ransom notes? Through handwriting expert James Sellers of Los Angeles, the state presented the above comparison to prove that Hauptmann did. At top is an authentic Hauptmann signature; below, a signature prepared by combining letters cut from the ransom notes. Sellers insisted that the composite signature proves Hauptmann was author of the notes.

3rd Hi-Jacking Is Reported in Boston

Thugs Kidnap Garage Manager, Steal $9,000 Truckload of Leather

BOSTON, Mass.—(AP)—Four armed men kidnaped the manager of a garage here Saturday, seized a truck of leather valued at about $9,000, and escaped.

The manager subsequently was released about 15 miles south of here. It was the third hi-jacking in Boston recently, the latest prior case being a $10,000 leather theft.

Police said they believed the same gang was involved in each theft.

"Fired" Reporter Causes Code Crisis

American Publishers to Resist Labor Board Ultimatum

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Howard Davis, chairman of the newspaper National Code Committee and the Daily Newspaper Code authority, Saturday announced that newspaper publishers will meet in New York City January 28 to "consider the action of the National Labor Relations Board modifying the daily newspaper code contrary to the provisions of Article VII."

"By direction of the six daily newspaper associations which co-operated in negotiating the code for the daily newspaper publishing business and also by direction of the code authority for the daily newspaper publishing business, a convention of all newspaper publishers who have assented to the code is hereby called to assemble in the Hotel Biltmore in New York City at 10 a. m. Monday, January 28."

"The convention will consider the action of the National Labor Relations Board modifying the daily newspaper code contrary to the provisions of Article VII."

"The decision of the National Labor Relations Board is vital not only as it affects further adherence to the code by the publishers, but more particularly as it affects a free press."

"All publishers who have assented to the code should attend the convention."

"If this decision by the National Labor Relations Board is consented to, even by silence, Article VII of the code, which was designed to protect the right of the people of the United States to have a free press, will be nullified."

"A detailed statement of the situation is being mailed to each assessor to the code."

The statement bore the signature: "Daily Newspaper National Code Committee and the Daily Newspaper Code Authority, Howard Davis, chairman."

The action of the labor relations board referred to by Davis was the board's demand that the NRA compliance division take away the Blue Eagle of the San Francisco Call-Bulletin on the ground that the newspaper had failed to heed its order for the reinstatement of Dean S. Jennings, a rewrite man.

Jennings contended he was forced to resign from the staff of the Call-Bulletin because of his activities in the American Newspaper Guild. The newspaper contended that the board had no authority to order reinstatement.

In a statement issued on December 28, Davis declared that the Labor Relations Board had asserted its jurisdiction over newspaper code controversies in violation of the provisions of the code.

8 Licensed Liquor Dealers in Hope

Same Number in Prescott—Hot Springs Leads State With 74

LITTLE ROCK.—Hot Springs has 74 licensed liquor dealers, more than any other city in the state, records at the office of the internal revenue collector disclosed Friday. A total of 728 retail dealers have paid the tax. Collector Homer M. Adkins said. Three wholesalers have paid the tax.

The tax for retailers is $25 and for wholesalers, $100 a year. Because sale of liquor in Arkansas is prohibited by state law, the federal excise tax of $1,000 also is applicable, but dealers are not paying it. A suit filed by S. O. Harris of Hot Springs to prevent collection of the $1,000 tax is pending in federal court, and was scheduled for hearing Friday, but was postponed because of a crowded docket, officials said.

Federal authorities will not interfere with dealers paying the government tax, but it does not relieve the dealer of prosecution for violation of state laws or city ordinances prohibiting traffic in intoxicants.

Little Rock has the second largest number of dealers.

Defense Asserts None of Lindbergh Bills Show There

Brokerage Firm Says Fisch Visited Office With Hauptmann

WRITING ON PANEL

Hauptmann Again Admits He Jotted Down Jaf'sie's Phone Number

Copyright Associated Press
FLEMINGTON, N. J.—(AP)—Bruno Richard Hauptmann's defense explored Saturday a maze of money, drafting evidence from his financial accounts to oppose state's testimony that he had mysterious incomes of nearly $50,000.

Writing through Hauptmann's bank and brokerage statements during the week-end recess of the trial the defense attorneys said they would show that the Lindberghs ransom notes failed to appear in a single one of the accounts.

The state took immediate steps to counter-attack.

Fisch Reappears

Friday as the state swung into testimony of the brokerage accounts in which it claims, much of the ransom money went, Edward J. Fisch, chief defense lawyer, found an opening. He drew from a brokerage customer's name that Fisch visited the firm with Hauptmann half a dozen times.

Near the close of their case, prosecutors pounded away at the sensational house and garage finds that developed when Bruno was trapped with a goldbacked ransom bill last September.

In the house a closet panel, brought into the light, revealed the scribbled address and telephone number of James F. (Jaf'sie) Condon, state witness sworn. From the garage beams, cunningly concealed, came walls of ransom bills—$14,600 in all.

"Jaf'sie," the old schoolmaster of the Bronx, has accused Hauptmann as the furtive "John" to whom he paid the $50,000 ransom in St. Raymond's cemetery the night of April 2, 1932.

The defense sought to cast doubt on the words and numbers on the wood trim panel. They found, unsuccessfully, to bar Hauptmann's admission that he wrote them, Reilly contending the words were "in the nature of a confession."

Hauptmann's Admission

Overruled by Supreme Court Justice Thomas W. Trenchard, Reilly repeated that Bruno's constitutional rights were being flouted as Benjamin Arac, assistant District Attorney Samuel J. Foley of the Bronx, began to read from Foley's questioning.

"Is that your writing on the board?" Hauptmann was asked at the time.

"Yes, all over it," he replied, Arac said.

"Why did you write it on the board?"

"I must have read it in the paper about the story. I was a little bit interested, and kept a little bit record of it and maybe just in the clouds of my mind, reading the paper and putting down the address."

"How did you come to put the telephone number on there?"

"I can't give you any explanation about the telephone number."

County Not Liable for Salary Notice

Attorney General Holds Expense Must Be Borne by Petitioners

LITTLE ROCK.—Miss Jessie Haynie, new assistant attorney general, wrote her first opinion Thursday as assistant attorney general. It was a routine reply to a question submitted to the office—one among hundreds that come in weekly—by Ray E. McDowell, county clerk of Hempstead county.

Her initial effort was, as follows: "In reply to your letter January 12 in which you ask whether or not the county is liable for the cost of having county salary acts published in the newspapers I am of the opinion that a county is not liable for such expenses."

"Amendment No. 5 to the Constitution of Arkansas adopted in 1920, as shown in the Constitution of Arkansas Annotated by Applegate, on Page 208, Section 1, provides that the expense of publication of proposed statewide measures shall be borne by the petitioners."

"This amendment does not provide for the expenses of publication of proposed county measures, but inasmuch as it does provide that the expense of publication of statewide measures be borne by the petitioners, it would appear that the expenses of publication for county initiated acts should also be borne by the petitioners."

"Several other inquiries on this point have been received in the attorney general's office."

Arthritis May Affect Body in Many Forms

Any condition associated with an inflammation of the bones and joints is called arthritis.

Rheumatism, on the other hand, is a condition of inflammation which may affect nerves, muscles, fibrous tissue, or any other tissues of the human body.

Not all arthritis is the same. There may be sudden inflammations or chronic conditions lasting many years. There may be forms of arthritis in which there is simply a collection of fluid in the tissues, others in which there is overdevelopment of the membranes.

Furthermore, inflammations of bones and points may vary according to the kind of germ associated with the inflammation, or the manner in which the inflammation comes about.

In cases in which there is sudden inflammation of a point, the first signs are usually pain with limitation of movement, swelling, redness, and a feeling of heat in the joint. Moreover, the muscles around the joint may be affected by spasm, because they endeavor to limit the movement of the joint.

All sorts of germs may be involved in such inflammations, including the typhoid germ, the germ that causes pneumonia, the general pus-forming germs, and even those associated with venereal diseases.

Just as soon as the cause of the condition is definitely determined, the condition may be attacked through the cause. Thus, for certain forms of germs, vaccines or serums may be of value. In other cases it may be necessary to remove the infectious material from the joint by surgical procedures.

Associated with such measures it may be desirable to apply heat, massage, and similar physical procedures to encourage the blood supply of the tissues, which will result in bringing the forces of the body to bear in overcoming the condition.

As the healing occurs, the joint may be gradually moved and suitable manipulation will eventually result in a complete restoration of function, provided the damage to the tissues as a result of the infection has not been too great.

Here's a Book for Life of the Party—Entertain Your Guests With Puzzles and Problems

Despite the entertainment of the movies and of contract bridge, there still are many who would like to make an evening of it without resorting to discussions on the latest books or the events of the day.

For these, and particularly for the person who yearns to become the life of the party, R. M. Abraham has compiled a volume of tricks, puzzles, and other diversions that ought to fill out many an amusing evening.

The book, called "Divisions and Pastimes," is a sequel to an earlier volume along the same line—Winter

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

All-Purpose Cream Helps Develop Creamy Skin

An all-purpose cream is perfect for youthful complexions and for normal skins that need no special corrective treatments. A good one, made by a reliable house, simplifies daily beauty routines, keeps the skin normal and generally is entirely satisfactory until a woman realizes that she needs a heavier tissue cream to alleviate dryness. Even then she is likely to keep on using her all-purpose cream as a cleanser.

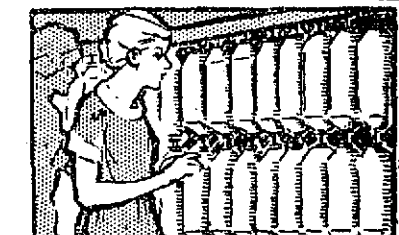

A three-purpose cream should do three things—clean and soften your skin and leave it ready for makeup. Not that you won't have to use foundation lotion, too. You will, but, if the cream is right, a little lotion will go a long way.

One particularly good cream of this type is a delicate, pale yellow color, has a sweet, floral odor that clings for hours and comes in handsome jars of pink or blue. Furthermore, because of its richness, a small jar lasts a long time.

At night, after you have washed your face and throat with soap and water, smooth on a thin coat of cream. Wipe it off and then apply another layer. Let this stay on while you are brushing your teeth, pinning on a hairnet to keep the finger wave in place and massaging hands and arms with hand lotion. Then, again using upward and outward strokes, remove the second coat. Better leave some on under your eyes.

In the morning, omit soap and water and use a small amount of cream for cleansing. Pat your skin with cold tonic and then put on foundation lotion and makeup. If you have no skin tonic, use cold water.

NEXT: A health exercise.

GALE HENDERSON, pretty, 23, works in a silk mill. Gale had two years of college training, hoped to be a teacher. When her father became ill she was glad to take any work she could get. She and her 10-year-old brother, Bill, support their invalid father, STEVE MEYERS, who also works in the mill and has proven himself a loyal friend, asks Gale to marry him. She feels she can not leave Bill and her father, finally promises to give Steve his answer in a few days.

Later that evening she goes skating on the river. The ice breaks and she is rescued by BRIAN WESTMORE, whose father, now dead, built the silk mill. Brian has spent the last two years in Paris. He asks Gale to wait while he goes for his car. When he returns she has disappeared.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Brian Westmore

CHAPTER III
BRIAN WESTMORE turned his back on the smoldering bonfire, moved disconsolately away. Only five hours before he had arrived in the town of his birth. Five hours and 13 minutes and some odd seconds exactly. At that time—five hours and 13 minutes and some odd seconds before—a large limousine had halted beside the railway station.

The woman inside the limousine spoke to the chauffeur. "I think I'll wait here, Frederick," she said. "It's only a few minutes."

"Yes, Mrs. Westmore."

The woman leaned back against the cushioned seat. She was a pretty woman with brown eyes and a fresh complexion. She was small, slender, wrapped in a sleek shining black fur coat.

There was a muffled noise beside her and the woman looked down. A small, glossy Pekingese raised its nose and repeated the noise, louder this time.

"Toodles!" the woman said reprovingly. "Muvver's little darlin' mustn't bark. Be a good doggy." She stroked the dog's head and silky ears. "Be a good doggy now, or Muvver'll scold!"

She caught up the Pekingese, holding the soft fur against her face. The dog wiggled, his moist tongue touching the woman's cheek.

"Precious 'little Toodle-ums!' she crooned.

The long-drawn whistle of a locomotive came from the distance and the chauffeur was on the ground, opening the door of the car. Mrs. Westmore put the dog down on the seat and stepped out.

"You can't come!" she warned, shaking her head at the Pekingese. "Stay there. Toodles. Muvver'll be right back."

The train was in sight now; it came on, snorting, steaming. Mrs. Westmore turned and spoke to the chauffeur but he could not hear what she said. He moved nearer, bent his head, nodded. Now the train was almost on them. With a mighty groaning and creaking the wheels slowed, came to a halt.

Train men were calling to each other, bustling about. Mrs. Westmore and the chauffeur hurried forward. Passengers had begun to alight. A girl in bright blue, a man with a little boy, a tall young man in a brown overcoat—

"Brian!" Mrs. Westmore called. "Oh, Brian!"

THE young man saw her, smiled and raised one hand. Another moment and his arms were around her. "Mother!" he exclaimed. "It's good to be home again. It's good to be here—"

He bent and kissed her. The woman said, "Oh, Brian, you've come at last!"

"Yes, and I'm going to stay a while." He drew back, eyeing her critically. "You're looking first-rate," he said. "I've been worried about you—oh, hello, Fredrick! How are you? Yes, I've got a couple of bags somewhere and let's see—here's my trunk check—"

"Brian, let me look at you! But you've changed—you've grown up—"

The young man laughed. "I'm a couple of years older," he reminded her. "Twenty-five! Didn't you expect me to change?"

"I don't know—I suppose so."

They had reached the automobile and the Pekingese, inside, saw them and stood on his hind legs, barking fiercely.

"Toodles, you naughty child," Mrs. Westmore scolded. "Give him to me, Brian." She took the Pekingese in her arms, cradling it close.

"Was Muvver's precious baby lonesome?" she asked. "Little, pretty doggy all alone!"

"Great Scott, Mother—!"

MRS. WESTMORE raised reproving eyes. "Now don't say I'm foolish about Toodles," she said. "I know it. But he's nervous and I have to be so careful with him. The least thing upsets him. He's been such a comfort to me this last year—while your father was sick and after—"

Brian said, "Of course." The limousine was moving along the wide, white pavement now. There was a pause and then the young man said evenly, "You understand, don't you, why I didn't come sooner? While Father was sick. I wanted to come."

"Yes, Brian, I know," Mrs. Westmore sighed. "Your father didn't mean to be hard. He didn't mean the things he said—that last time—"

"I wanted to come," Brian went on firmly, "but—well, I couldn't. Oh, I knew how Father felt. I didn't hold it against him—the things he said that day. He couldn't understand that I didn't want to go into business. I remember exactly what he said."

"What do you mean, Brian?"

"I mean I've found out I'm not an artist and never could be! I've known it for months but I wouldn't admit it to myself. When your cable came, it was a shock. There didn't seem to be any reason to come back then; it was too late. I tried to go on the way I had been. Tried to work harder. Then one morning about 10 days ago it came to me that the thing for me to do—the thing I really wanted to do—was to come home."

"I'm glad, Brian," the woman said.

"Yes, and I'm glad, too. Do you know what I'm going to do now? I'm going to do the thing Father wanted me to—go into the mill. I want to find out what it's all about—learn the business. I've been getting some new ideas lately, reading what's going on in this country. I've discovered that business isn't the dull routine I used to think it was. It's alive and exciting—human. It isn't everyone grabbing for himself and trying to get the most these days; it's figuring out what's right for everybody and everyone doing his share. I want to have a part in it!"

"YES, Brian," the woman said, "we'll have a talk with Mr. Thatcher. I'm sure he'll find something for you—if that's what you want to do. And, of course, I'm glad to have you home. Mr. Thatcher has been so wonderful. Brian! So helpful. He's relieved me of all responsibility."

"How are things going at the mill?"

"Oh, splendidly! Simply splendidly!"

"I've read about the labor troubles they've been having in other mills," the young man said. "Nothing of that sort here?"

"Oh, my no! Why should there be? The men and women in our mill are getting good wages—big wages! Why you'd be surprised how much they make—$40 and $50 a week, and in families where three or four are working they're getting as high as $150 and $200 a week."

"Is that a fact, really? I mean that wages have been kept up?"

"Why, certainly it is. Mr. Thatcher told me the mill is doing everything possible to keep our employees happy and contented. He says he regards each and every one of them as children and that they can come to him with their problems at any time. He's only too glad to help them."

"And has he managed to keep employment up to standard, as well as salaries? I mean keep all the workers on?"

"Why, yes, I think so. You see Mr. Thatcher has such a marvelous system. Everything runs like clockwork. I don't know how many times, Brian, I've thought how fortunate we are in having a man like Mr. Thatcher to take all the worry and burden from our shoulders."

"I guess you're right," Brian agreed.

The limousine slowed and turned into a drive bordered by a low stone wall. Back against the trees was a stone house—a large, rambling, impressive house, set in grounds that had been tastefully landscaped. The limousine followed the winding drive and halted before the entrance.

Immediately Brian was outside. His mother said, "Well, Brian, welcome home."

Morrison Leaves S. M. U. for Vandy

Famed Aerial Coach Returns to Alma Mater at Nashville

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—(AP)—Ray Morrison, Southern Methodist University gridiron coach, Friday accepted an offer to become head football coach at Vanderbilt University, his alma mater, where he was an athletic star. Morrison telegraphed from Dallas to Chancellor James H. Kirkland: "Happy to accept invitation to work with you. Best wishes."

Morrison will succeed the veteran Dan McGugin, who retired as head coach last fall to become athletic director. Ringmaster of the celebrated S. M. U. "aerial circus," Morrison will come to Vanderbilt with an enviable record. From 1920 to 1934 inclusive, the period he was head coach at the Dallas institution, his teams won 80 games, lost 29 and tied 20.

"Broadway Bill" at the Saenger

Myrna Loy and Warner Baxter on Screen Sunday and Monday

The casting of Myrna Loy opposite Warner Baxter in "Broadway Bill," which comes to the Saenger Theater Sunday and Monday, brings her together again with the first leading man she ever had on the screen. Baxter was the star of "Remedios," a silent picture, in which Miss Loy received her first important opportunity. "Broadway Bill" is a romantic comedy in which Baxter plays a reckless, lovable roustabout, and Miss Loy is a home-loving, feminine counterpart of him. The role gives this clever actress a fine dramatic opportunity and something entirely different from "The Thin Man" and other parts she has played lately.

To Abolish Fees

Abolition of the fee system, and placing of county officials on salaries, was proposed in the senate by Senator Gathings.

Anti-narcotic laws, aimed at co-ordination of the state with the federal anti-narcotic drive, were suggested in bills making their appearance in both houses.

Removal of the evils of poll tax buying by the wholesale, crooked vote counts and other illegal practices in connection with elections, was sought in a lengthy measure offered in the house by Mrs. Ella B. Hurst, of Washington county, the only woman member of the legislature.

If a bill by Senator Hardy becomes law, the exemptions on income taxes will be lowered from $2,500 for a head of a family to $1,500, and of a single person from $1,500 to $1,000. A man and wife, both of whom worked, would be forced to count their joint exempted income at $1,500 and pay a tax on all above that amount.

Nine proposed changes in the constitution were suggested in the house, one of which, by Campbell of Garland would abolish the legislature and set up a one-house legislative system composed of 35 members who would meet as often as they desired.

One would abolish the poll tax and require registration of persons desiring to vote.

Another would repeal the provision of the initiative and referendum amendment allowing initiation or referring of statewide measures, leaving that amendment to apply only to county or municipalities.

One would permit the levying of a 12 mill local school district tax and nine mill state tax for the common school fund, and another would restrict the millage to 10 for local districts, the revenue to be used strictly for building programs.

The remainder all concern the exemptions of homesteads or personal property from taxation.

ens had introduced 206 witnesses from the Crossett precinct who testified that they had voted for him. Judge Henry ruled that 10 of these witnesses were not entitled to vote. Subsequently, he ruled that Kitchens had received 16 legal votes at Crossett.

As certified by the Ashley County Committee, Parks received 479 votes to 35 for Kitchens at Crossett.

From the Parkdale precinct the committee certified that Parks had received 147 votes to 14 for Kitchens. During the trial 60 persons from Parkdale precinct testified that they voted for Kitchens. Judge Henry found that five of these were not entitled to vote and that Kitchens should be credited with 55 votes from this precinct.

The vote from the district in the run-off primary as certified to Democratic State Committee showed that Parks had received 14,065 and Kitchens 13,774.

On an admitted error in the Ashley county vote, Kitchens gained 98 votes. The Crossett and Parkdale vote, as corrected by Judge Henry, gave him 132 more.

Kitchens gained 26 votes by the throwing out of illegal ballots in Clark county. He gained five votes in a similar manner in the Hempstead county absentee ballots.

The throwing out of illegal ballots cost Kitchens the following:

Hempstead ..... 231
Nevada ..... 86
Columbia ..... 56
Chicot ..... 22
Total ..... 429

Park's losses were:

Hempstead ..... 93
Nevada ..... 36
Columbia ..... 19
Chicot ..... 22
Crossett ..... 121
Parkdale ..... 46
Total ..... 337

Parks gained 10 votes among the Hempstead county absentee ballots. This made a net gain of 152 for Kitchens and a net loss of 454 for Parks.

Music

Notes of Interest to Music Lovers of Southwest Arkansas

Facts and notes of the National State and District Federation of Music Clubs with which the general public should be more familiar.

It was in 1893 during a musical festival at the World's Fair in Chicago that the first convention of Women's Music Clubs was ever held in America, at which time Mrs. Theodore Thomas was named the honorary president.

From then the inspiration and desire for a National Federation of Music Clubs grew until 1898, when the dream of these noble women was realized and 23 clubs assembled in Chicago, Jan. 28th and became charter members of this beautiful Federation temple of music.

During these 36 years the membership has grown from 23 to over 5,000 musical organizations in 48 states, Alaska and Hawaii; thus a minimum of 4,000 cities have become centers of musical culture and inspiration, prompting musical and cultural ideals of invaluable influence in city, town and rural districts.

Building for the future and realizing the music of the future depends on the boys and girls of today, the Junior Division of the Federation under the leadership and guidance of sponsors and are being trained for community, musical and culture leadership.

Under the leadership and guidance of such splendid women as these National officers and Department Chairmen America is taking her place musically among the other and older countries. Following is the N. F. M. C. officers: President, Mrs. John Alexander Jordine, Fargo, North Dakota; First Vice President, Mrs. Elmer James Ottaway, Fort Huron, Mich.; Second Vice President, Mrs. T. C. Donovan, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Third Vice President, Mrs. J. F. Hill, Memphis, Tenn.; Treasurer, Mrs. H. L. Miller, Madison, Wis.; Recording Secretary, Mrs. Henry Schumann, Indianapolis, Ind.; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. H. Carroll Day, Albert Lea, Minn.

There are seven departments, with many divisions under each heading. Extension Chairman, Mrs. Abbie L. Soody, Mexico, Mo.

Junior, Student, and Young Artist Contests

Since 1913 $300,000 has been awarded in prizes by states, districts and the National Federation, thus stimulating and encouraging the study of music.

Engagements, experience, positions, and advance, for, or against, concert career, and money awards for study are made.

Lindbergh Plans New Pacific Hop

His Company, Pan-American, May Launch Service Afterward

Copyright Associated Press

NEW YORK.—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh is expected to take the leading part in the conquest of another ocean for United States aviation as soon as the court in Brumington, N. J., decides whether Fleming Richard Hauptmann murdered his son.

The famous flier, it was revealed by associates Friday, is expected to fly the Pacific ocean preliminary to establishment of an experimental air transport service between American and the Orient which will reduce transportation time between Asia and America to 60 flying hours.

The Pan-American Airways System, whose technical committee Colonel Lindbergh heads, is advancing plans for establishment of an experimental air transport service to link California, the Hawaiian islands, the Philippines, and other American possessions in the Pacific and the Orient. Other islands tentatively included the route are Midway, Wake, Guam and probably Yap.

Colonel Lindbergh was engaged with plans for this service, when Hauptmann was arrested, and as a result of this arrest, the Colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh returned to the East from California four months ago.

It is not expected that Mrs. Lindbergh will make the Pacific flight, as she did the two trips over the Atlantic with the colonel last year.

Lindbergh, who has played an important part in pioneering the present Pan-American route that link the United States with 33 countries of the West Indies, Central and South America and are also established in Alaska and China, has conducted a large share of the actual field research looking toward early establishment of an American air service across both the Pacific and the Atlantic.

The company's actual plans for operations from the Pacific coast are not known, but it is certain that Los Angeles will be a terminal and that San Francisco will figure as an operating base since the company's program is known to contemplate serving both Los Angeles and San Francisco in the trans-Pacific service.

Seven—Brinkley, Lepanto, Lake Village, Marked Tree, Stuttgart, Truman and Van Buren.

increasing interest of its members in a definite program for the advancement of music as outlined by this great organization.

This meeting called by the national president, Mrs. John Alexander Jordine, brought together representatives from over thirty states, including two past national presidents, national officers, board members, district and state presidents, and national chairmen.

The reports of the members gave proof of the fact that the policies of the Federation have become more comprehensive in order to meet the changing times. The social-economic emergency has challenged the Federation, and through co-operation with state and federal agencies, projects for unemployed and needy musicians have been created in various Federation centers. The national president is guiding these activities from her own office and from her temporary headquarters in Washington.

Resolutions of Importance adopted by the Board of Directors:

That a message be sent to President Roosevelt requesting that early consideration be given to the appointment of a Minister, or Secretary, of Fine Arts in the Cabinet, which action would place the United States in the front ranks of those countries concerned with the spiritual welfare of their people and with the success of their creators in all arts.

That the National Federation of Music Clubs deplores any tendency to curtail school music activities; that it insists upon the re-instatement of music to a position of equality with other subjects in the curriculum, and urges that the highest musical and educational standards shall be maintained in the selection of musical personnel and in the adoption of equipment and materials intended to further the cause of music education.

Club Program Is Held by Kiwanis

2-Minute Speeches Delivered by 20 Members at Dinner Friday

Extensive talks by more than 20 members featured the Kiwanis club program Friday night at Hotel Barlow. Each speaker was limited to two minutes.

Most of the speakers told of benefits derived from being a Kiwanian, and suggested promotion work in civic activities for the new year.

It was decided Friday night that the Hope club would join hands with the Kiwanis club of Texarkana Monday night in observing Constitutional week.

Approximately 20 members indicated that they would make the trip to Texarkana.

Three Hope members are listed on the program. They are John P. Cox, W. S. Atkins and Geo. P. X. Strassner. The meeting at Texarkana will be held in Grim hotel.

position they will take will be decided at conference. Senator McNary of New York had not decided when he would call the House Republicans together.

A "tremendous" and favorable interest in old age pension legislation was reported by Representative Keller, Democrat, Illinois, to have been evidenced by governors in response to questionnaires he sent them recently.

Keller said Governor Talmadge of Georgia was the only one out of 31 who replied that he had expressed opposition to such benefits for the old. He said Talmadge expressed fear that the pension would destroy the incentive to the young to work and accumulate for themselves.

The Illinois member said most of the governors favored $30 a month, one suggested $40, and one proposed even a larger amount.

The old age pension plan proposed by the administration called for the federal and state governments to bear jointly and expense of giving a maximum pension of $30 a month to persons already over 65 and for those younger than that to join them employers in contributing to a fund which eventually would be self-sustaining for the payment of pensions when they reach that age.

A daily dog walking service has been started in New York, so now the dogs' owners needn't have to take them that much exercise any longer.

Senator Robinson Proposes Home Loan Law Amendment

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Senator Robinson, Democrat, Arkansas, majority leader, offered in the senate Friday an amendment to the home owners loan act by which he would circumvent the debts of drainage, levee and other improvement districts that have stalemated efforts of property owners in the districts to borrow from the HOLC.

In a statement explaining his bill, Robinson said it was designed "to prevent discrimination against home owners on account of the various methods of financing public improvements."

Under the proposed measure, any levies of assessment upon property made by the improvement districts would be treated as general taxes, and the resulting liens on property in the district could be considered as attaching to the property only at the time fixed by the district for the payment of levies and assessments.

A further provision of the senator's bill was that the lien of any mortgage on property in the district would be treated as prior to liens securing payment of all district assessments not due at the date of the mortgage.

The HOLC would be authorized to determine the reasonable annual burden of taxes on property in improvement districts, but could not deduct from its estimate of the loanable value of the property any district assessments which were not due when the loan was made.

HARRY GRAYSON

LOS ANGELES—One of those customs dating back to the first days of organized distuffing has been revived with some measure of a flash heretofore. I refer to the quaint habit of fighters and ex-fighters have of opening saloons.

Good old repeal did it for most of the boys, and now Los Angeles and Hollywood are replete with beer joints, so-called "clubs," and out-and-out hash houses bearing the names of this ring great and that.

Most of the places trade on the reputation of battles of bygone days. Once in a while there's a touch of the pathetic about 'em, and not infrequently a bit of humor. In the latter category, for instance, I put the several beer hangouts titled "Spider Kelly's." I've seen at least half a dozen. Spider Kelly is dead.

Bob Perry, that grand old baldpate who was a second that night at Coney Island—Nov. 3, 1899, it was—when Jim Jeffries fought Tom Sharkey, has the hottest hangout of the moment for the sporting fraternity. It's on Hollywood Boulevard, not far from Grauman's Chinese Theater, and is particularly busy after the Hollywood bouts on Friday nights. Perry was the

Down the street is the Brass Rail, and co-owner of this spot is big Tom Kennedy, who will be remembered by many an old-timer.

Everybody's Doing It

Jackie Fields tried his hand at the restaurant business here, also on Hollywood Boulevard, but couldn't make the grade and now is learning the gentle art of editing motion picture film.

Just the other night in Perry's I ran into Bud Taylor, that great little fighter of Terre Haute. Did I say "little"? He weighs 180 pounds—and well do I remember watching him, a blond cyclone, as at lithe and trim a 125 pounds as you could wish to see.

A great little machine, that Taylor, with heart to spare, whose last year in the ring was disastrous. He's going to open a place, too.

Over on the wrong side of Los Angeles' Broadway there's a nearly blind man running a cheap beer parlor whose name will stick in fistic history if for no other reason than that he's the only man to hold a knockout over William Harrison Dempsey.

"Fireman Jim" Flynn of Pueblo hasn't been having things too easy these later years. He tried taxi-cabing in Phoenix, but couldn't make it produce any pineapples, and someone threw a benefit show for him that would up owing itself $4.

Just where the money came from to start the beer joint probably will remain a mystery, but rumor says that same Jack Dempsey put it up. Not at all an improbability, if you know Dempsey.

The Good Old Days

The boys have some distance to go to acquire the reputation of a couple of local saloons of the old days—notably those ran by Jim Jeffries and Barney Oldfield, now residing here. Both were centers of sporting activities.

Jeffries' old partner, Jack Kipper, now chief inspector for this section of the state boxing board, tells many an amusing story of those times.

As was usual, the heavyweight champion was a constant target for well-boiled huskies, who fancied, given a few extra shots, that they could flatten Jeffries.

Jeff always avoided such barroom brawls, and when the wouldbe conqueror of the champ got too obstreperous, the job of quieting him with a solid whack fell to Kipper. So Kipper would sock—and break his hand.

He lost track of how often that right mitt went to the doctor, but estimates it was plenty.

Dempsey hasn't been out much lately. The boys miss him, but that new New York cafe venture keeps him in the east most of the time.
